ENGINE CAUSES INJURIES

THOUGHT PROBABLY HALLOWEEN FOOLING RESPONSIBLE FOR ACCIDENT

Mr. Hugh Moore is lying in the local hospital suffering terribly from serious burns about the face and hands and wrists, caused by the explosion of a natural gas engine at the R.P. No. 2 well site.

For some long time Mr. Moore has had charge of the pumping plant at the well, which is run by a converted steam engine now using natural gas from the well.

On Saturday night last three men on horseback were seen around the premises by Mr. Moore, but he could not get close enough for recognition. The men were trespassers. On Sunday he started up the pump as usual, and returned from the pumphouse to his living quarters close by. He at once noticed that the engine seemed to be "running away," and went back to the pumphouse. He at once shut off the gas supply to the engine thinking that some little fixing was required, when immediately the engine exploded, with the result that Mr. Moore was thrown to the ground very badly burned as described above and the pumphouse was at once a mass of flames.

The patient was rushed to the hospital by Harry Elliott, who was at the site, and under the doctor's care he is progressing as well as can be expected yet. It is fortunate that the explosion did not injure Mr. Moore's eyes, although his hair was badly burnt off and the flesh almost cooked on both his hands.

Things certainly seem to be picking up these days around town. Wheat prices are better; grading ranges high and the bonus cheque comes handy. On the average wagon-load the bonus cheque alone will pay your subscription to The Star for Two Years and you receive a box of Christmas Cards FREE in addition.

TO STUDY PROBLEMS OF CANADIAN RAILS

ROYAL COMMISSION BEING APPOINTED TO ADVISE ON POLICIES AND ECONOMIES

OTTAWA, Canada.—Problems of duplicating service, of general policies, of economies in operation, in the railroads of Canada are to be studied by a Royal Commission appointed by the Federal Government. The first suggestion of such a course came from Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, when he was giving evidence before a special Parliamentary committee, and after consideration the Government has accepted his recommendation.

Canada's two great railroads, the Canadian National, owned by the nation, and the Canadian Pacific, privately-owned, of which Mr. E. W. Beatty is president, have experienced a sharp reduction in revenue during the prevailing depression. The falling off has been met in part by drastic economies, but the situation has called attention to questions of future policy on which the Government has decided to seek expert advice.

One of the most important matters before the Commission is the short-haul competition given the railroads by motor trucks and buses which has cut seriously into their receipts. It will not be surprising if the Commission recommends more rigid regulation of these services and increased license fees. There will be inquiry into overlapping services given by the railroads in various forms, into the necessity of otherwise of duplicating branch lines, and into the possibilities of more intimate co-operation and more intensive economy in many directions.

It is the hope of the Government that the Commission will complete its inquiry and report before Parliament meets early next year.

HALLOWEEN PARTY BY KLIMAX CLUB

The members of the Klimax Club spent a very enjoyable evening at the L.O.O.F. hall on Wednesday last by way of celebrating the Halloween festival. A large number were present, and dancing and contests kept things lively till the wee small hours. A delightful supper was served during the evening, and the "scholarship" appearance of the guests added to the fun.

GE MEMBERS PAY VISIT TO CHAUVIN

Three or four carloads of Wainwright Oddfellows took the trip to Chauvin on Wednesday evening last, for the purpose of a "get-together" and while there held a special meeting of the Entertainment branch. A real fraternal time was experienced by those attending the gathering and a very pleasant time was spent until well after midnight, not the least of the pleasures being the surprise lunch of "hot baked mulligans." A return visit is planned, so we learn.

LONE CANADIAN WINS ELECTION

LONDON.—Lieut.-Col. Hamilton Gault, who is known all over Canada as the man who raised and equipped the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry for service in the Great War, was re-elected as Conservative member for Taunton, Somerset, in the British general elections. Col. Gault is an Englishman by birth but he lived in Canada for many years. He went to France with the Princess Pals and was wounded three times. He was mentioned in dispatches four times and was awarded the D.S.O. among other honors.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH IS INQUEST VERDICT

YOUNG MAN ON HORSEBACK RIDES RIGHT INTO SPEEDING CAR

Thrown heavily against the pommel of the saddle when the horse he was riding collided with a car driven by John Peterson, three miles south of Jarow on Wednesday last, a young man known only as "Bob" received injuries from which he died before Peterson could rush him to the doctor at Jarow.

The victim of the accident had been engaged as a farmhand on the Finkus farm, but had not told anyone what his last name was. He stated, however, that he had once worked for an Edmonton gas company and that his father had been employed by the Macdonald Construction company in Edmonton.

These two leads, however, failed to definitely establish the accident victim's identity. Alberta provincial police believe that his last name was Durand or Durand, but are not positive.

An inquiry into the affair was held on Thursday and the jury summoned by Corp. Collett, A.P.P., of Wainwright returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

It has since been discovered that the dead lad's name is Skerrett, and that his home was in Edmonton.

FANNY HURST NOVEL IS NOW PICTURIZED

BRENON'S REALISM TURNS SET INTO LITERAL OVEN AT HOLLYWOOD

Bending over an old-fashioned cook stove and preparing a meal in a kitchen where the temperature hits the 120 degree mark sounds like one of the things that isn't being done in the life of a modern woman—especially a well-known Hollywood actress.

But Winifred Westover, playing the title role in Herbert Brenon's all-talking production, "Lamorna" now showing at the Elite theatre had that experience at the United Artists studios in Hollywood, and she cooked and served the meal as carefully as she would have done in real life. As was atmosphere in the screen version of Fanny Hurst's famous story, Brenon insisted on a real cook-stove the kind found in the kitchens of the best eastern homes twenty years ago. The fire was real, the food was real, and the temperature on the sound-proof stage was almost insufferable.

William Collier, Jr., Edna Murphy, and others in the scene ate the huge platters of steaming food served by the servant girl "Lamorna" for the benefit of the cameras and microphones, as though they relished it, but they dashed out into the fresh air later and intimated that they thought Brenon was carrying his realism a bit too far.

Some of the principals including Ben Lyon, Myrtle Stedman, and Ida Darling, escaped the feast, but their turn came before "Lamorna" was completed—and fortunately they encountered a cooler day. This pleasing United Artists' feature is at the Elite this week end. Don't miss it.

GILT EDGE M.D. HOLDS REG. MEET

SECRETARY'S OFFER TO REDUCE OWN SALARY ACCEPTED WITH THANKS

The Council of the M.D. of Gilt Edge met on Thursday last when Councillors Black, Withnell, Sutherland and Beasley were in attendance with the Secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were adopted as read.

Moved by Coun. Black.—That the circular letter from the department of municipal affairs, under date of Oct. 14th re direct relief be noted.—Carried. Moved by Coun. Withnell.—That the account for lumber supplied to the M.D. Church, Coun. Black interview the lumber company. Later in the meeting this delegate reported having obtained a reduction of $16.35 in the account under notice.

Moved by Coun. Beasley.—That Mr. T. Nicholls be instructed to have the loose wire on W/S 36-46-5 gathered up within fifteen days, otherwise the municipality to do so and charge up the cost against the land.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Beasley.—That the matter of road deviation on the S.W. 3 and S.E. 4 and S.E. 9 in 46-5 be left in abeyance pending the roads act having been opened up; and that if and when this occurs compensation will be made.—Carried.

The Secretary reported that the municipality's claim on the money in the hands of Sheriff Rae to an amount of the Federal Grain Co's loan has been relinquished.

The Secretary also reported that the department cannot grant the request from the various Councils and Board to have the Battle River hill gravelled.

Moved by Coun. Sutherland.—That the secretary be instructed to write a letter of thanks to Dr. H. Cousler for gratis services to H. Ferguson.—Carried.

The Secretary reported that Mr. B. O. Kasper was placed in the municipal hospital by Dr. Maynes, who intimated by letter his refusal to attend Mr. Kasper without pay. Moved by Coun. Jones.—That municipality pay for medicine for Mr. Kasper, whilst an inmate of the hospital.

Moved by Coun. Sutherland.—That the 1930 and 1931 taxes against the N/4 and S. W. 35-45-5 be exempted under clause "P" of the Wild Lands Act.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Withnell.—That the Secretary's offer of a salary reduction of $25.00 per month for October, November and December of the 1931 financial year be accepted with thanks.—Carried.

The weed inspector's report having been read and accepted, and the accounts totalling $785.24 having been passed for payment, the Council adjourned to meet again on November 17th next.

CHINESE LILIES HERALD APPROACHING YULETIDE

Heralding the approach of Yuletide, ten carloads of Chinese Lily bulbs and holly were recently shipped over Canadian National Railways from the Pacific Coast to cities throughout Canada and the United States. First harbingers of Christmas, the fragile bulbs will be planted by tender hands wherever the spirit of Santa Claus prevails and, by December 25, the lovely white flowers will blossom to add beauty to seasonal festivities.

POPULAR INTEREST GROWS IN JUNIOR FARM CLUB WORK

An important extension of popular interest in the Junior Club Council and its work is marked by the announcement from A. E. MacLaurin, General Secretary, that East-rn Dairies Ltd. and the Industrial Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers have taken out membership in the Club Council of Boys' and Girls' Club work.

The Eastern Dairies, Ltd. operate large milk and cream distributing establishments in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton and Winnipeg, and also some thirty-eight plants for the manufacture of ice-cream, milk powder, condensed milk, cheese butter and casein over a wide area extending from Richmond P. Q. in the east to Yorkton, Sask. in the West.

The Industrial Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers is an association representing the large packing houses which operate throughout the whole of the Dominion. It has always been keenly interested in assisting practical movements having as their object the promotion of agriculture in all its phases, particularly improvements in the breeding, feeding and finishing of livestock.

NO MODESTY ABOUT THIS WEDDING CAKE

Traditional Oriental modesty has evidently no part in the "building" of cakes for Oriental weddings. One of the largest wedding cakes in the annals of Canadian weddings was shipped to Vancouver recently by Canadian National Express from Edmonton. This cake was made especially for the marital festivities of Frank Mah and Miss Mary Lam, two well-known members of the Chinese fraternity in Vancouver. Frank Mah is one of the Chinese representatives of the Passenger Department of the Canadian National Railways in Vancouver, and received the cake from his brother, who is a resident of Edmonton. The cake weighed ten pounds because of the construction, three men were needed to handle the cake.

REBEKAH MEMBERS DISTRICT MEETING

On Tuesday of last week a number of the members of the Rebekah degree L.O.O.F. journeyed to Irma where Mrs. J. Billings, was in charge of the district meeting for District No. 5, as D.D.F. of that branch of the Order. Quite a large attendance were present and a number of routine matters appertaining to the work were on the agenda. The election of officers for the coming year was carried out, and before adjourning all sat down to a truly sumptuous repast which had been prepared by the Irma sisters.

SHIPPING ANOTHER CARLOAD VEGETABLES

STILL ANOTHER DOZEN CARS CAN BE USED IN SOUTH

As noted last week the carload of vegetables shipped from the Wainwright district to Cereval was greatly appreciated. Further news, by letter, confirms this and states that it was all given out in one day, averaging about one each of potatoes per person, and a few cabbage, carrots and turnips. Another half carload could have been used. Some families had vegetables and in some cases were hailed out as well. Nearly all expressed surprise and deep gratitude at such a generous gift coupled with the arduous work of picking, sacking, and loading.

In a telephone conversation with a government official in connection with this relief work, Rev. W. J. Huston learned that at least a dozen more cars were needed and only four or five were in sight.

A number of people of this district were too busy to have a share in the last carload and wished to do something to help. The Battle Heights Anglican congregation last Sunday volunteered to give one hundred sacks. The people of Auburndale are arranging for about three hundred bushels. The weather is still favorable for saving potatoes that are still in the ground. Believing that volunteer labor would be forthcoming to save potatoes from being frozen and that there are still others who will want to give what they have to spare for those who are in real need a refrigerator car has been ordered. It will be at Fabyan on Thursday and Friday of this week and at Wainwright on Saturday and Monday. Kindly notify W. T. Morrison, Greenfield's G. Mad der, Fabyan or John Davis, Auburndale if you can do anything to help this worthy cause.

LOCAL BOY SCOUTS GIVE FINE DISPLAY

ALL FORMS OF ACTIVITY ARE "TROTTERED-OUT" FOR AUDIENCE

On Wednesday last the local troop of Boy Scouts under the leadership of Scoutmaster C. Lilly, gave a display of scouting work and activities in the Masonic hall, when a goodly crowd was in attendance.

The audience were highly appreciative of the showing made by the boys, this consisting of knotting, tumbling, signalling, pyramid building, different games, and first-aid work.

In the latter item Dr. Wallace, and Miss Page, superintendent of the hospital inspected the work of the young lads and were loud in their praise of this branch of the scouts' training. The evening wound up with a scout camp-fire sing-song in which all joined heartily.

EXPLAINING GOV'T BONUS ON CHEQUE

NUMEROUS QUESTIONS ASKED ARE ANSWERED TO GIVE INFORMATION

The findings or interpretations placed by the Board of Grain Commissioners on several points arising in connection with the five-cent bonus were assembled recently by the Scarle Grain Co. in question and answer form. Many farmers are perhaps not as clear as they might wish to be as to whom the bonus is payable, and the following may be of interest.

Where a farmer sells this year's wheat to another farmer for seed or feed, does he get the bonus? Answer: Bonus only paid on what sold to licensed elevators or delivered over the platform for shipment to licensed grain dealers, where unloaded in a licensed mill or terminal and sold there. Wheat sold by a farmer to any other than a licensed elevator can under no circumstances receive the 5c bonus.

Is a farmer entitled to a bonus on wheat used for feed or seed? Answer: No. Farmer owning land put in crop in 1931, moved away August 31st, renting the farm to a tenant on a 1/3 crop basis. In view of the owner having put crop in and renting same just before crop was cut, is not the owner putting in crop entitled to all or 1/3 of the wheat bonus?

Answer: No. Rentor or tenant entitled to full 5c bonus on all crop.

Suppose a tenant has contracted with owner of land and the tenant is to deliver half of crop to the elevator for sale and the owner of the land refuses to allow the tenant to deliver the same and with the owner and the tenant's grain held off the market during this crop, how is the tenant going to get his bonus? Answer: The Board advise in regard to the above that it is their opinion that the owner of the land could not refuse to allow the tenant to deliver the crop, if the documents between them are the usual tenant and owner agreements.

A is owner of the land, A rents to B, A supplies seed, one-half the twine, pays one-half threshing, and gets one-half crop at the machine. Does A receive the bonus for his share of the crop, or is B entitled to the bonus on the whole crop?

Answer: The Board's ruling on the above is—B gets the bonus on the entire crop.

A sells land to B on contract, B to deliver one-half the crop as payment of land. Does B get the bonus on the whole crop grown?

Answer: The Board's ruling is—Yes, B gets the entire bonus.

Land owned by estate and estate supplies all land, machinery, horses, two-thirds of the twine, two-thirds of the hauling cost of the grain to elevator and contract with tenant states that two-thirds of grain must be delivered to estate, and does the estate get all the bonus or two-thirds of the bonus.

Answer: The Board of Commissioners' ruling is tenant receives the bonus on entire wheat raised irrespective of the destination of the wheat or the contract. The estate receives none of the bonus.

The youngsters around town sure had lots of fun Friday and Saturday evening by way of celebrating Halloween and most of it was harmless amusement. Although letting the air out of all the tires of a doctor's car in front of the home of a patient was carrying things a little too far. It might have caused serious trouble had the car been wanted for an emergency. The boys are known and surely their ignorance to recognize this fact can be their only excuse for doing such a mean action!

RAILROAD MAINTAINS OWN WEATHER BUREAU

So concerned are the Canadian National Railways with the vagaries of wind and rain, cloud and sunshine, heat and cold, that they maintain their own weather bureau. Every eight hours, day and night, clicking telegraph keys report to divisional headquarters throughout Canada, "what's doing" in the way of weather. The reports determine the temperatures of refrigerator and heater cars and also determine the crop yields to be hauled to market by the railroad, so that, months before harvest time, nearly 40,000 grain cars can be distributed throughout the Prairies to handle the grain movement. Track repair work is likewise affected and the loading of trains depends on the weather since a sudden cold snap reduces by as much as thirty per cent, the tonnage a locomotive can pull.

TRUCK TAKES FIRE ON MAIN STREET

On Thursday morning last, a Chevrolet truck being used for rucking wheat just managed to get to town with its load, when the driver Jack Carroll, having trouble with the engine stopped to put things right when the engine burst into flame. Word was sent to the fire brigade, but a pail of water from The Star office soon had things all safe, and the chemical was therefore not needed. Little damage was done except to the wiring.

CELERY STALKS SURE SELLERS

Western Canadians are ready to take the big crunch movement seriously as celery growers of Theford Ont., prepare to ship one of the best crops yet grown in that premier celery producing area of the Dominion. Theford growers are this year extending the marketable area for their product to the Prairies, according to officials of the Canadian National Railways. Arrangements have been made to transport the celery in specially designed refrigerator cars and, with three hundred car loads of the favorite table viand ready for consumption, a large movement is anticipated.

SHOOTING FATALITY UP NEAR THE RIVER

HARVESTER SHOOTS HIMSELF AS ATTEMPT MADE TO KILL RAT

While attempting to kill a muskrat along the river bank on Wednesday last, by striking it with the butt end of a 12- a shot-gun, Fred Sandul aged 18 years, had the charge of shot enter his chest with the result that he was killed instantly.

From information to hand it is learned that the deceased came to the district a few weeks ago as a harvest hand, and had worked with the Tory threshing gang. Later he went to work on the Touch place, and on Wednesday he and Mr. H. Tonds went to the river to shoot game.

A rat ran closely to the deceased, and it is thought that as he struck at the little animal with the butt of the gun, the trigger of the weapon struck on a rock which thus caused the accident as noted.

Corp. J. H. Collett, A.P.P., and Dr. Maynes, who were called to the scene made the necessary inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the untimely death of the young man, and decided that the affair was purely accidental.

The remains were prepared by the McLeod undertaking parlors, and shipped to Vita, Man., on Monday, where the deceased's mother was found to be residing.

TRANS-CANADA ROAD LINKING PROVINCES

WORK UNDER WAY ON 5300-MILE PROJECT JOINING EAST AND WEST

TORONTO, Canada.—One of the most picturesque roads in the world is to be constructed through the Rocky Mountains in the course of linking up existing east and west highways in Canada to form a surfaced motor road from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Instituted primarily as an unemployment relief project with Federal and provincial governments dividing the cost, the Trans-Canada Highway will open up to the motor tourist much beautiful country and magnificent scenery.

In Eastern Canada the Trans-Canada Highway largely will follow existing provincial roads, and the principal new construction will be in Northern Ontario and in the Western provinces. From Winnipeg westward the route goes by Regina and Calgary, entering the Rockies at Banff and proceeding by way of Revelstoke and Kamloops to Vancouver. Canada, at the latest computation had 394,872 miles of public road open to traffic of which more than 50,000 miles were surfaced—35,000 miles in the latter classification being in Ontario. It has been estimated that more than 150,000,000 pounds is invested in Canadian highway systems and expenditures last year were 15,000,000 pounds while maintenance cost 4,800,000. The Dominion has one horsepower motor vehicle to each eight of its population of ten million persons.

BESSBOROUGH URGES CANADA BANISH GLOOM

BUSINESS MEN SHOULD SHOW FAITH IN SELVES, GOVERNMENT-GENERAL SAYS

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—A demonstration of the gloomy prophets, and an appeal to the business men of Canada to show faith in themselves formed the basis of the address which His Excellency the Governor-General, Lord Bessborough, delivered to the Canadian Club at their luncheon here Friday.

"I am convinced times would be already appreciably less bad if a large number of people, with more imagination than judgment, had not contracted the morbid habit of proclaiming there are far worse things waiting for us around the corner," said the Governor-General. "I am not suggesting our troubles can be dismissed with some simple formula as 'if only we all pull together everything will come right,' that attitude is as dangerous as the other. Our troubles are very real and to overcome them will test the very foundations, the very genius of our civilization. But if we know the one thing that no man need ever lose, that is faith, then indeed the fault will not be in the stars but in ourselves."

His Excellency dwelt on the fact that the faith in our institutions had been the keynote of the British Empire, and concluded his brief address with the statement "it is just because I have found in Canada that its people still hold fast to their faith in Empire and their country and themselves that I refuse to entertain for one moment any doubt as to the ultimate future of Canada."

Never mind about it being a little tardy, a donation of fruit or vegetables to the hospital will be thoroughly appreciated. Drop these in at the Star office and they will be acknowledged.

PLACE OF CANADA SIXTH IN EXPORT

EVERY EFFORT BEING MADE TO HOLD AND IMPROVE HER POSITION

MONTREAL, Canada.—Among all the nations of the world Canada held sixth place in export trade last year, and in aggregate trade, surpassing such countries as the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and Argentina. It is too early to count the effect of the low commodity prices of 1931, and of the world-wide depression, but business leaders are confident the standing of Canada will be altered little, if any.

Every avenue through which the Dominion's export trade may be increased is being explored by the Government and private interests. There are distinct signs of improvement in business with Australia, following the new trade treaty, and it is believed that if a treaty can be concluded with South Africa similar results may be expected. A scheme has been under consideration for a fortnightly steamship service between Canada and South Africa, but it may not come into being unless a preferential pact is signed.

There are held to be particularly bright prospects for Canadian trade in Latin America, and it is understood Canada and Brazil shortly will negotiate a treaty. Low grain prices have forced greater production of dairy and general agricultural products and exports of butter, eggs, cheese and cattle have shown a marked advance over last year. In France an excellent market is being created for Canadian apples and cattle.

Much interest was aroused by the arrival here of the "Canadian Constructor" as a "Goodwill" ship from Australia, and when it returned at the end of October it carried a cargo of representative Canadian products. The goodwill ship carried in both directions a complete line of the goods the sale of which is facilitated by the provisions of the new trade pact.

BABY IDA SANTEE PASSES AWAY FRIDAY

Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Santee of Fabyan on Friday last, when little Ida Ruth Santee one of the recently born twins passed away from acute indigestion at the age of seven weeks. The funeral was held in Wainwright on Saturday, when Rev. W. Huston of the United Church officiated. McLeod's parlors conducted the arrangements.

The True Canadian

An Original Novel of Canada

An Epic of 2024 A.D.

By Ralph Huntingford

Rising at eight thirty that morning he went downstairs and was met by Lemieux who greeted him with "Well our friend escaped sometime this morning."

"Escaped! How did he get out?" "He evidently had some friends close at hand when we locked him up because the lock was forced from the outside."

"Are the plans alright?" "Yes! I have them put away safely."

"Well! I am sorry he got away, I had wanted to question him."

"Well! I am sorry he got away, I shall double the guard and exclude all strangers from the plant. What are you going to do now?"

"I hardly know what to do, which ever way I turn I seem to be backed up. I know no more who the perpetrators of this business are now than I did when I started."

"How would you like to go through the plant today, it is very instructing."

"I should enjoy that, and then I think I must go back to Montreal and start in where I was before."

McLeod thus spent the day as agreed upon. He saw the new plane in course of construction but Lemieux did not go into any details regarding it.

Upon returning to the house that evening, McLeod went to his room to prepare for dinner, after going down into the library. A short while later Lemieux came in holding a letter in his hand. He looked worried, and in addition, McLeod thought that he had aged considerably in the last hour. He was about to ask him what the trouble was when Lemieux extended the letter to him and without a word, sat down at his desk. McLeod, looking at the letter, read this startling communication.

"Jules Lemieux, your daughter is in our hands and our only hope of ever seeing her again is to deliver the plane of the aeroplane where you are told. Refuse to do this and she will be killed. Any trap set or any attempt to trace us will only result in her death. Signify your consent by wearing a gardenia in your lapel tomorrow morning, you will then be instructed further. signed The council."

"When did you get this?" asked McLeod.

"The maid found it under the door this morning."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"There is only one thing to do. Surrender the plane. They are a life's work but Claire's life is in danger. There is no choice."

"Let us think this matter over rationally. It may be a bluff. Have you verified the statement?"

"No! I had not thought of that."

"Well now, the first thing to do is to find out if it is true, so going to the Radiophone McLeod, asked for connection to Lemieux's home in St. John. Soon Marion's image appeared on the grid screen and she said. "Oh is that you Armand?" seeing by her instrument who had called her.

"Yes Marion, I called to see if Claire is home."

"No she is not, she went out for a walk this afternoon and has not yet returned. Did you want her?"

"No! I only wanted to verify a letter which we have saying that she was kidnapped."

"Kidnapped. Oh Armand, poor Claire. Who could have done it?"

"We do not know yet. Will you call me in an hour and let me know if she has returned. She may have visited some one and come late."

"Yes I will, is that all?"

"Yes Marion, goodbye," saying which McLeod rang off and turning to Lemieux who had been listening intently, he said, "We must have some dinner in order to keep our strength up for what a before us. We can plan as we eat."

Going to the dining room they were served at once. During the meal McLeod said, "Will you put this affair into my hands entirely?"

"But what good will it do? We have no time and besides that I do not take any chances with Claire's life. She is all I have."

"You must hold them off for twenty four hours to give me a chance to investigate. There is more to this than the plans of the aeroplane. It is part of a nation-wide conspiracy and I must get a lead somewhere. I leave for St. John as soon as Marion calls again. Where can I get a fast plane without a fuss?"

"Take mine, if you must go, it is in my private field and always kept ready."

"All right, now do as I say. Wear a gardenia in the morning as a sign that you agree and when you are told where to leave the plane, leave a letter telling them that you sent the plans to St. John for safe keeping directly after the attempted robbery, and that I have gone after them. I am afraid that I shall have to crash your plane in order to make them think that I am injured and cannot get back at once. The smash will be recorded on the Radiophone and they will be sure to see it. You must make them believe in you. Everything depends on it."

"What are you going to do in St. John?"

"I don't know yet but I can do nothing here to help Claire."

"I will do my best," said Lemieux, and Armand, whatever the outcome, you are a True Canadian."

McLeod thrilled at the words, for they reminded him of what Marion had said. Just at this moment Marion called again and McLeod, going to the Radiophone asked, "Any news yet?"

"No Armand, whatever shall we do?"

"Well Marion, I am leaving at once for St. John. Will you meet me on the main highway, about three miles west of Sussex, somewhere about eleven tonight? I shall be walking and will hold something white in my hand so that you can recognise me."

"All right, I shall be there. Is there anything else?"

"No, that's all," McLeod rang off and said to Lemieux, "I shall leave at once Jules."

Lemieux took him by the hand, and said with tears in his eyes, "God speed you Armand. I will do my part."

McLeod went to the flying field and wheeled out the plane, a small single seater, of fast design, climbed in, and in short order took off.

Setting his course for Montreal by the route that he had traversed in coming down to Sydney, he in due time saw the beacon lights of the airport. During his trip, his thoughts had turned to Marion, with whom he had just been talking, and despite his worry over Claire, he experienced an indescribable feeling of happiness when he remembered that she had called him by his first name.

Passing over Montreal he now began to think about crashing the plane, so, setting the controls into neutral he buckled on his parachute. As soon as he sighted Sussex he turned in line with the highway and sending the plane into a glide, at five hundred feet he baled out. Pulling his rip cord as soon as he was clear of the plane, a sudden tug at his shoulders straps told him that the chute had done its duty so he at once began to look for a place to land, eventually doing so in a field adjacent to that highway not far from his designated position. Slipping from his chute, he hid it in a ditch, and then strolled down the road. No cars were in evidence but as he continued he saw twin lights ahead, as a car rounded the corner. Taking his handkerchief out as the lights approached, he held it so that it could be seen, and wiped his brow. The car passed him without slowing down. Four times he hid it and the then fifth car slowed to a stop and Marion leaned out of the window and said, "Armand?" He greeted her and quickly got in beside her. Marion then turned the car and sped for St. John arriving there at eleven fifty p.m. As soon as they had arrived McLeod asked her to drive at once to the government police station where he left her for a few minutes and went in to interview the police sergeant.

At the desk he gave his name and business, saying, "My plane crashed at Sussex and I want you to have the news broadcasted widely, adding that I was injured and taken to hospital. It is necessary that the people that I am after think that I am incapacitated. Will you see to it?"

"Certainly sir, right away," the sergeant made answer. Returning to Marion McLeod was rapidly driven to Lemieux's home where Marion, who had throughout the drive been talking incessantly of Claire, said, "What are your plans, Armand?"

"First, I should like to know in what direction Claire went. Do you know?"

"She spoke about going up to Signal Hill and started off that way."

"Well, I can do nothing much till daylight. I think I will rest for a while and then try to pick up her trail in the morning."

"That is a good idea Armand, you do look tired. You had better have a hot drink and then go to bed. The servants have all retired so I will get you something here." Marion went to the Radio operated buffet and soon had a cup of cocoa ready. McLeod drank this, and then went to the room Marion pointed out and laid down for a couple of hours rest. Barely an hour after Marion herself had retired, she was roused by the Radiophone alarm and throwing on a dressing gown she went down to answer it. She was surprised to see the masked face of a

APPLES FOR WINTER USE MAY BE CANNED OR DRIED

Have you looked over your supply of apples to see if they are keeping all right? Sometimes you will find a few of the early varieties showing signs of decay. Even if only two or three apples are affected, you will be surprised how quickly the trouble will spread.

Pick over the apples and remove all the spoiled ones. Great care should be taken in handling the apples. Careless handling will cause more bruises.

Apples should be stored in a dry, cool place and away from light. If your storage space is not satisfactory it might be wise to dry a few of your apples. Putting them in jars, using the cold pack method is also advised. This applies particularly to the earlier varieties of apples.

DRYING APPLES

Peel and core the apples. Cut the apples into rings about 3/16 of an inch thick. Place the sliced apples on a large piece of cheesecloth. Gather up the corners of the cheesecloth so that a large bag is made. Lower into a pot of boiling water for half a minute. This stops the enzyme action and the apples do not discolor.

Allow the apples to drain and spread an even layer on a piece of cheesecloth. Place in the warming oven. If a clothes rack is available spread some wire netting on this and cover the wire with cheesecloth. Place the apples on this improvised screen and let dry at room temperature. With the usual heat in the kitchen the apples should dry very quickly.

CANNING APPLES

Now that the jars are getting empty it might be a good idea to fill up some of these empty jars with apples. The cold pack method will be found to be most satisfactory.

Wash and test the jars to be sure they are airtight. Put them in the boiler with some lukewarm water. It is wise to put a clean towel under the jars. Gradually bring to the boil so that the jars will be thoroughly sterilized.

Wash, peel and core the apples. As they are peeled, drop into a pan containing weak brine. Use one teaspoon salt to one quart cold water. This prevents discoloration. As soon as the apples are all peeled, blanch them by dipping in boiling water for two minutes.

Pack the hot apples into the jar and fill the jar with syrup. Use a thin syrup made by boiling one of sugar with one of water for five minutes. You will find that it takes about one cup of this syrup for a quart jar. Fill the jars to overflowing. Partly seal the jars.

Put a rack in the bottom of the boiler and put the jars in the hot water. The same water that was used for sterilizing the jars can be used for this. Cook the apples in the jars for thirty minutes after the water has started to boil. Remove the jars from the boiler. Seal the jars and cool. Test again to be sure that the jars are airtight.

If desired, the apples may be made into applesauce. The hot applesauce should be packed into the jars and the time of cooking is then reduced to twelve minutes.

If you would like further information about canning, please write to me. While the 1931 canning of fruits and vegetables is over, it is time now to can apples and meats. I will be glad to send you a booklet giving complete information about Home Canning. It is particularly well illustrated and each of the 70 pages is packed with helpful information. There is no charge for this material. Use the coupon at the bottom of this article.

Household Hints

Brown bread gives more food value than white bread because the bran contains vitamins, mineral matter and cellulose.

Canned foods have more vitamins than cooked foods. The canned goods are not exposed to the air during the cooking and this reduces the loss of vitamins.

Dip hard-boiled eggs into cold water at once. This makes them easier to peel for salads.

men on the grid screen, as on a screen, she said, "Your friend Claire Lemieux is confined in a room on the second story of No. 328, Argyle Street. She is in the third room on the right of the landing. Two men are guarding her and there is no time to lose if you would save her." His image then faded away as the connection was broken. Marion immediately rushed to McLeod's room crying, "Armand, Armand! I have found Claire. I have found her wake up."

McLeod awakened from a heavy sleep to see Marion standing over him. She was shaking him by the shoulder and repeating, "I have found her. I know where she is." He arose hastily, fully dressed, and calmed the excited girl, managed to extract the information from her in what he called a rational manner. He recognized in the masked informer, his late rescuer, and from this fact decided that the information was genuine, and not a trap.

Asking where Argyle street was he prepared to go to Claire's rescue. Marion informed him that she was coming too and they argued considerably over this matter (their first disagreement) and of course, as usual, the woman won, so as soon as she was dressed for the street, they left on their venture in Marion's car.

This time McLeod took an automatic with him as the car turned into Argyle street he looked to its mechanism. He told Marion to stop before she came to No. 328 and giving her some final instructions, proceeded by himself to the house. Trying the handle of the door he found it unlocked, no easing it gently open he stepped inside, closing it quietly after him. Flashing his flashlight he took stock of his surroundings, and then, hearing no noise, stealthily went up the stairs. Near the top a stair creaked and he instantly "froze" waiting for some minutes before he continued. Gaining the landing safely he listened carefully outside each door as he passed. There was no sound, but on coming to the third door he saw a thin ribbon of light showing underneath.

Putting his ear close to the woodwork he could make out the sound of voices, but could not hear what they were saying. He concluded that there were but two men in the room.

Grasping the door knob in his left hand and holding the gun firmly in his right, he gradually slipped the latch. Very slowly, with an almost imperceptible movement, his steady nerves showing no sign of the excitement he was undergoing, the latch was withdrawn from its keeper until a slight click told him it was free.

Then, throwing the door open, he leaped inside the room, saying in an impelling voice, "Up with 'em quick," and covering the two men he saw in front of him, with the gun. At the words, the men, who were seated at a table, sprang to their feet. One of them, in whom we see our old acquaintance Chowitsky put up his hands, but the other, with the speed of a practised gunman, drew a gun and hastily fired at McLeod. Chowitsky, seeing his companion's action, made as if to spring at McLeod but stumbled against the gunman, causing him to miss his mark, as he merely wounded McLeod slightly in the left arm. McLeod's gun vomited flames and the bullet caught the gunman in the bridge of the nose, killing him instantly. Chowitsky, taking advantage of McLeod's diverted attention, dashed by him striking out at him as he went. McLeod grabbed at him and caught his hand but Chowitsky tore loose and made his escape, leaving a finger ring in McLeod's hand as he went. The latter thrust the ring in his pocket and searched for Claire. He found her in an adjoining room, lying on a bed, bound and gagged. He quickly released her and carried her in to the room where he had surprised the men. Here he found Marion standing, with an automatic in her hand. She was gazing in horror at the dead man. McLeod gave Claire over to her charge and then turned to examine his victim. He had never seen him before and could find nothing on him of any consequence so covering the corpse with a bedspread he assisted Marion in taking Claire to the car.

On arriving at Claire's home, McLeod, despite the pain in his arm, did not forget that Lemieux was anxiously waiting to hear the outcome of his rescue. He called to the Radiophone the established connections with him. Lemieux's face lit with joy when he heard of Claire's release and he asked for her immediately.

"I am quite all right, father," Claire said, speaking to him, "thanks to Armand."

"I am very glad dear, I shall come home at once. Tell Armand not to leave before I get there as I wish to speak to him, goodbye Claire." Lemieux switched off the machine, and Claire, going to McLeod and putting her hands on his shoulders, kissed him. "That is a poor recompense, Armand," she said, "but nothing that I can give you will adequately pay for what you have done."

"I was very lucky to have been so successful. You must tell us, when you have rested, how you were abducted," was all the reply McLeod could make.

Marion, who had gone for some refreshment, now returned with a tray and passed it round to the others. As McLeod stretched forth his hand to take a cup of coffee, she saw the blood on his wrist. "Oh, Armand, you are hurt." She spilled the tray in her hurry, to see it down, and rushed to the first aid cabinet for some bandages and taking off the handkerchief that he had bound around the wound, she saw the ugly hole the bullet had made. At the sight of it she turned deathly pale and McLeod thought that she was going to faint, but pulling herself together she swabbed the wound with iodine, the tears welling in her eyes as she saw him flinch. Deftly she bound the arm up, saying, "You poor boy, does it hurt?"

McLeod laughed, as he said, "If I am going to get all this attention every time I get a scratch I shall make a point of being hurt every day. This broke the tension and as they sat before the radiator Marion poured some more coffee while Claire told of her experience.

She had gone for a walk and he just started climbing Signal Hill when she met two men coming towards her. She had thought nothing of that but as they passed, one of the men grabbed her while the other had placed a pad over her mouth and she had at once lost consciousness. She regained her senses in the room in which she was found. The man who had been killed had spoken brutally to her, but the other had been very kind and seemed to have a distaste for his job. Then McLeod had burst in and she knew she had been found.

The look that she gave McLeod would have stirred a sterner man than he was and to escape from his embarrassment he turned to Marion and said, "Look here young lady I thought I told you to stay in the car while I went into the house."

"I did Armand, until I heard the shots and then I just had to come," she said simply. "You might have been killed."

They were now feeling the reaction and Claire said she thought a good sleep would do them all good, so saying, goodnight they went to their rooms, leaving McLeod alone.

He, lighting his pipe, sat thinking over the night's work. At least he had definitely placed Chowitsky as one of the enemy, and thinking of the ring, he took it from his pocket and examined it. It was a plain affair, set with a small Garnet. He remembered seeing it on the man's hand at Fort McPherson. He was about to put it back in his pocket when he chanced to look inside, something was engraved on it. Looking closer he made out the numeral (6) and the letters "F. C. G." He puzzled over this for a while. What did the letters mean? Evidently Chowitsky was number six but what was the organization? Finding himself nodding over the business he put the ring away and went off to bed. At least he thought as he climbed the stairs, he had a clue, his first one. Rising later that same day he came downstairs, only to find that Marion had preceded him. She greeted him with "Good morning Armand, how's your arm?"

"It is a little stiff, Marion, otherwise it seems all right."

"That is fine, I will dress it again tonight. Mr. Lemieux will be here shortly. He left Sydney some time ago. What are you going to do now? Shall you stay in St. John long?"

"No! I think not. I must go to Ottawa as soon as I can and have a talk with Paul."

"Have you heard how the sergeant is?"

"Not a word, but I imagine he must be a pretty restless patient. Paul loves action."

"Is Paul the only one like that?"

"You don't mean me, do you Marion?" he said with a laugh. "I admit I act when forced to it, otherwise I like to go slow."

"You are a very modest man and brave."

"Oh, no Marion, you just want to make a hero out of me. Any man would have done as much for a friend. Some men, Armand, not any man listen, I think that is Mr. Lemieux coming now."

As Marion spoke, Lemieux came into the room. He kissed Marion and going to McLeod took both of his hands, saying, "Everything that Jules Lemieux owns is yours Armand. McLeod, I can refuse you nothing for

Money for the Farmer's Wife

EVERY farmer's wife should have a bank account; there are so many things to save for—things for the home—a holiday trip—or the proverbial rainy day.

restoring my daughter to me," and being too full of emotion to say more he turned to Marion and mutely asked for Claire. Marion took him to Claire's room and shortly afterward they came down together.

"We have decided," he told McLeod, "that Claire had better go away for a time. The change will do her good after the ordeal she has gone through and besides, it may ward off another attack."

Marion made reply, thinking quickly. "That is a good idea, Claire can stay a day or two's rest, the two girls and come and visit me in Calgary."

It was settled this way and after McLeod left by plane for Ottawa, while Lemieux once more came in his mind went back to his work at Sydney. We will ask our reader to accompany us to Ottawa, where we will resume our story.

PART TWO

CHAPTER ONE

Resting in the convalescent ward of the Ottawa General hospital, Sergeant Paul Browning was making rapid progress toward recovery. He had received information that McLeod and his companions had arrived from St. John and was eagerly anticipating a visit. His wishes were realized as they came in about thirty, on the afternoon of their arrival. (Continued on Page Seven)

Doubling a Retail Business in Five Years

An Advertisement Addressed to

TO DOUBLE A RETAIL BUSINESS IN FIVE YEARS, ADD 15 PER CENT. TO THE SALES OF THE PRECEDING YEAR AT THE END OF FIVE YEARS, SALES WILL BE DOUBLE THEIR PRESENT AMOUNT.

our Local Retailers

Increasing one's sales to the extent of 15 per cent. per annum to sales can be accomplished in two main ways. Thus:

1. Increase the amount of each sales transaction by an average of 15 per cent. (Note: This is not the same as raising your prices 15 per cent. To do that would be fatal, even if possible.)
2. Increase the number of customers served daily to the extent of 15 per cent.

Good salesmanship will enable a retailer to raise the level of his average sales transaction—with advantage to both his customer and himself. Thus a well-informed buyer will readily pay 20 cents or 25 cents more for a pair of gloves or stockings or shoes or for a piece of enamelware, if the better value of the higher-priced article is well presented.

A silent retailer can hardly hope to increase his business; and it's pretty certain he won't double it in five years.

Issued by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Assoc.

But the better way of raising sales to the extent of 15 per cent is to increase the number of your customers.

Customer-increase comes from (1) satisfactory service, (2) satisfactory goods and prices; (3) good window displays and (4) good advertisements in this newspaper.

Men and women buyers always want to be informed, in their homes, by newspaper advertisements, about things which they plan to buy; and they are responsive to retailers' invitations. Also, they like to see the advertisements of those retailers whose customers they are.

Food Expert Finds White Bread Attack Unjustified

SO much has been said about the value of whole wheat bread, some of it correct and some exaggerated, that it has been overdone by the extremists and the pendulum is swinging back again to a wiser variety in bread according to Dr. R. E. Lee, research director of Standard Breads Limited, in a talk before Canadian bakers.

"Periodically," says Dr. Lee, "the agitation for whole wheat bread breaks out like an epidemic, runs its course and dies out. No one can justly attack bread, be it white or brown. Both have a place in the diet. Flour is one of the most completely digestible foods we have. All varieties of bread are good, but one would not think so after reading the articles of those who advocate the use of only whole wheat bread.

ways included in reducing diets. "Much that is written about white flour is carelessly applied to white bread, forgetting that white bread as made today is a highly supplemented food, containing salt, fat, milk, yeast and usually malt extract.

"White bread should have as prominent a place in the diet as any other, but no single variety of bread should be exclusively eaten. The value of variety of breads is unquestioned. Variety of breads not only supplies a variety of ingredients so helpful in supporting maintenance in normal growth, but it stimulates the appetite. A tired appetite will often result from an unbalanced diet. Refresh it with variety and see it respond.

"Everyone should eat plenty of bread, for it is a splendid aid to the body, but we should be careful not to dull our appetite with sameness. We should discover new delicacies in the variety of breads in the bake shop just around the corner."

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA NOVEMBER 4th., 1931

Another year for the Wainwright Star has come and gone. With this issue we are commencing the 24th year of its publication and the 10th under the same management. There are many times for a newspaper, and if our subscribers appreciate the Star, we hope they will readily after threshing just drop a few dollars in our hands. There is no question but that it will be fully appreciated. Read our offer as advertised this week.Occasionally the editor receives a card from a postmaster—"Address removed, present address not known."
This, after we have forwarded every copy of the Wainwright Star for several years. Nothing can be done in this instance. But, it is evident that in order to protect ourselves we must discontinue sending the paper to those who are in arrears and place the accounts in other hands for collection.unquestioned value in meeting this time problem and at the same time giving occupation to heads and hands.The boy gains the community point of view. For instance, Boy Scouts are today rendering service through the relief organizations in many ways, such as making job and relief surveys helping charitable groups collect glass jars from householders for the canning of surplus food products for the needy, helping to distribute them collecting clothing, etc. The boy recognizes the importance of service to the community; he expresses that recognition in concrete activities. The Boy Scout program has been described by a leading educator as having a breadth and depth to satisfy the demands of every type of boy.ANNUAL REPORT PUBLISHED BY FOREIGN BIBLE SERVICEThe following is a short review of "Dust of Gold" being the popular report of "The British and Foreign Bible Society, 1931, by the Rev. Edwin W. Smith, literary superintendent.The popular report, so eagerly looked forward to by all friends of the British and Foreign Bible Society brought out the world in this year entitled "Dust of Gold" a phrase taken from the famous 28th chapter of the book of Job.As usual, the editor draws on literary treasures "old and new" in his treatment of the subject. After the prologue which deals with the history of gold mining, the chapters have significant titles: "Treasure sought and found"; "Channels among the rocks";
"To the furthest bound"; "Breaking open a shaft"; "Gotten for Gold".
Into these chapters Mr. Smith weaves examples of the heroism and daring shown by those who translate and circulate the scriptures and in a very wonderful way links the search for gold with the outstanding features of the annual report. He also illustrates the principles laid down by vivid examples chronicled in the society's annals for the year until, instead of a drab statement of fact, the whole is lit up by beauty of language, felicity of phrases, and aptness of quotation.
There are several references throughout the book to Canada and Newfoundland. Emphasis is laid on the difficult economic conditions which faced Bible Society workers here; but their spirit is summed up as follows: "This state of affairs did not lead our workers to despair, but to more energetic endeavour. The spirit that animated them is revealed in a statement which comes from South Saskatchewan.
"The policy of the auxiliary was that of the industrious farmer who does not believe that an occasional crop failure means the death of agriculture. We gathered the harvest where-ever available, and summer-fallowed
the human soil where the crop failed in preparation for the crop that will not fail. There is a reference too, to the work of Dr. Heine, the society's colporteur, who speaks 26 languages and acts as a port worker at Saint John, N.B., and also visits lumber and mining camps in Quebec and Ontario. Colporteur work in Western Canada also receives honourable mention.A new feature is a synopsis placed before each chapter, and an apt quo-tion from Karl Barth's famous book, "The Word of God and the Word of Man" prefaces each section.
In the closing pages, reference is made to the new twenty-five cent English bible, the cheapest obtainable made possible by the generous birthday gift from Canada and Newfoundland. Whilst gratitude is expressed for this generous gift, the reading of the report leaves the definite impression that the Society is always in need of funds to carry on its work.This brilliant piece of work ends with a reference to the symbolic use of gold in the holy scriptures. "It was among the gifts offered to the infant saviour; and when John saw the holy city new Jerusalem, coming out of heaven from God, the city was as pure gold—as if God had made it of all the golden prayers and golden devotion of His people."The whole report emphasizes the responsibility of the society in the translation and circulation of the scriptures, and gives abundant evi-dence of the never-ceasing activities of a society that is not only the auxiliary of all missionary societies at home and abroad willing to avail themselves of its translations, but also of the great agencies for the evangelization of the world.The book is tastefully produced and illustrated by photographs dealing with gold mining and also with photographs of colporteurs at work offering to the people the written scriptures—"More to be desired than gold, yes than much fine gold."

BABY BEEF

(Experimental Farms Note)

Under other than ranching conditions it is doubtful whether any finish can ever be put on a lean steer so economically as the calf fat can be retained for a baby-beef finish.By the first of November a spring calf nursing his dam should easily scale 400 pounds. Some will go 500 pounds or more. Many steers weigh not much over twice that at two years of age and they still to be expensively finished. Even though their eighteen-months' feed consists largely of grass and straw it usually has some value, besides which are labour shelter, salt, interest and risk. Where grass has any value worth mentioning this plan produces costly gains.Baby beef has generally shown a neat return even although the best-finished seventeen months calf the writer ever fed did sell in April, 1931 for $56 due to the crash in prices.
The purchaser who was an experienced butcher declared that it was best beef he ever cut and cheerfully paid more than he bargained for it. This calf nursed a farrow cow to the last but was not otherwise expensively fed.Ordinarily the returns from calves are good. In December, 1929, at a point 435 miles from the Edmonton market two thirteen months old calves were sold from the Beaverbridge Substation farm as Christmas beef, bringing $82.50 apiece net. They had nursed the dam of one almost to the last and although not stinted for farm-raised chop feed, were not extravagantly fed. A little grain goes a long way on a calf. Their unfatted weight when sold was close to 950 pounds apiece.Most feeders of baby beef wean their calves in the autumn but where a warm-enough shed is available so that teats will not freeze the writer has found it profitable to employ the dam for nine or ten months instead of six. Through the medium of the udder she can convert much coarse feed into calf flesh and with but little grain the youngsters carry along rapidly to a high finish. Milk adds a spicy flavour to baby beef.Fairly good results may be had from well-fed calves when the skim-milk is suitably supplemented, as with flax seed and a very easy way of milking is to put two calves on one hard milking old cow such as most herds afford. The skimmed milk of the second calf's dam will be good for the pigs. This plan can even be followed with dairy-bred steers which if beefed at all, should be turned off before the dairy type develops. InMay, 1929, a nine months old calf Holstein calf realized $38 on the local market.Baby beef production is perhaps not a good system for a poor feeder. The calves should be kept coming without a reverse. Retain the calf fat. Don't forget that those wheat bonus checks will buy coal, storm doors, storm windows, etc., from the Atlas Lumber Co., and even though wheat prices are firmer we have got to face the icy blasts of another winter very shortly. We insure threshing machines,

COWSThe basic principles of feeds an successful feeding of dairy cattle depend upon variety, palatability, nutrition and succulence of the ration.
Dairy farming is a specialized business and the feeding of dairy cattle for maximum production is a science.Generally speaking, the variety of feed which is annually grown on the prairie is somewhat limited, in comparison with other parts of the Dominion. In other words, the prairie farmer plans his farming operations to include such feeds as can be economically grown on the farm in quantities to last throughout the year. A variety of feeds invariably helps to stimulate and keep up the milk flow.Feeds annually grown on the average dairy farm may be classified as roughage and concentrate. RoughageRelieve

Golf

NO game, with the exception of billiards and snooker pool, is conducive of so much satisfaction and at the same time provocative of such a variety of emphatic language as is this game of golf. (If you want to be up-to-date imitate the man from John O'Grato's and say it "gawf.")But golf is more than a stimulant of satisfaction and emphatic language. It has become a serious contender with fishing for first place as the source of exaggerated yarns and stories of impossible feats.You've heard of the golfer who killed a bird on the fly with one of his take-offs; and then comes along the story of the other chap who killed two birds in the same way.
The stories of "a hole in one" are innumerable but here are two of the latest—the latest so far as I have heard, at any rate.K. P. or somebody else for that matter, on one of the Toronto courses, made a beautiful drive for the 18th hole. A hundred and fifty yards from the mat the ball hit a rock in a bunker, about 10 high over the mat and dropped gently into the hole of No. 1 green, which lay exactly 90 yards in the rear.An enthusiastic golfer from Beauveville, P.Q., or some other town in that part of the country, was a member of the party when the story of this remarkable performance (?) was related. Whether it was the result of a desire to push Toronto into the shade as a golfing city, or the association of ideas, or of a vivid and stimulated imagination, I do not know, but here is the story that followed as the Quebecois told it:
"Pierre, an old friend of mine, was an enthusiastic golfer, but as a hooker and slicer he had anything I ever saw beaten forty ways. On one occasion he sliced a drive so badly from No. 7 mat that it took a beautiful curve round to the right and dropped into the hole on No. 12 green, 20 yards behind the mat of No. 7.""Well," said one of the party whose home is beyond the Atlantic,
"You Canadians fluke some wonderful feats in golf, but when the decisions are being made for the big cash prizes at the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference at Regina in 1932, flukes won't count."Our good friend from across the sea was right. It is clearly the responsibility of every Canadian to select the classes from the prize list best suited to the crop he grows, then select the best sample he has for his exhibit, make entry at once and prepare to forward his exhibit to reach Regina on or before March 1st next year. Competition for the 1,700 prizes will be keen as all classes are open to growers from all parts of the world. Canadians owe it to themselves to do something worthy of Canada's field crops.Golf, nevertheless, is one of the world's greatest games and all the stories about chasing the pebble-like ball round an open field after the manner of children only tend to make it more popular than ever among outdoor men and women the world over.FARMERS

SOME PLAIN FACTS

For Alberta Grain Growers' Consideration

It is of vital importance to every grain grower that a strong grower-controlled co-operative elevator system should continue to function in this province and the Alberta Pool elevator organization represents the only facilities in the province that meet those requirements. This elevator system represents an investment of approximately eight million dollars, contributed by Alberta farmers, and the only method by which this substantial equity can be protected and continued operation assured under grower control, is through the producers of this province extending their patronage to the system.
This applies to grain growers throughout the province, whether Pool members or not.All country elevators of the Alberta Wheat Pool are operated under public license and as such are in a position to handle any grain of any farmer on any basis provided under the Canada Grain Act. The Alberta Wheat Pool further emphasizes the fact that its elevator system is on a sound financial basis, has ample working capital, is managed efficiently, and can give unequalled service to the grain growers of the entire province. The agents are carefully selected and strictly instructed to give fair and equitable treatment, including proper weights and grades for their grain, to all customers.Alberta Pool members should not, in all fairness, seek to place any blame on the Alberta Pool elevator system for the payment situation in connection with the 1929 and 1930 pools. The sales of grain and the issuing of payments therefore came under the jurisdiction of the Central Selling Agency. The Pool elevator system had nothing to do with the situation. Responsibility for the administration and operation of the Alberta Pool elevators has always rested with the provincial organization and on that record the system deserves consistent support.The Alberta Pool elevator system has been in operation for four years. In that time the giving of good service and equitable treatment to patrons at the lowest possible cost has been the main purpose kept in mind by the elevator administration. At the same time, during those four years, the excess earnings of the Alberta Pool system, after allowing for depreciation and payment of six per cent. on the actual money invested, has provided an average annual sum of more than $470,000. A portion of these excess earnings has been distributed to growers on a patronage basis and a portion retained by the organization to provide working capital.It is desired to again emphasize the importance of growers delivering their grain through Pool elevators on the basis that the Pool is endeavoring to operate these facilities without discrimination between customers and with the definite policy of extending fair treatment to all persons using such facilities, and under this policy your patronage is essential to the continued operation of these cooperative elevator facilities under producer control.

GROWING, SELECTION AND PREPARATION OF GRAIN & SEED FOR EXHIBITION

(Copyright, 1931.)

By Herman Trell

FINISHING NEW SHOW SAMPLE AND REFITTING OLD ONES

Pairs are venerable. They were popular away back in the days of ancient Greece. The Romans recognized their educational value long before Caxton invented the printing press. They are even more popular today. The modern exhibition is one of nature's greatest advertising mediums. An up-to-date show parade is a most magnificent sight. It is a gorgeous display of fashion and splendor.

The fancy stock man greases his dresses his prize animals and birds in a most elegant manner before they are presented in the show ring. Beautiful seeds like animals, live they merely breathe in a different form of nature. Seeds, like animals, too, may be adorned and trimmed.

Here and There

Over 1,600,000 lbs. of salmon were caught in the coastal waters and rivers of Quebec last year, or $15,000,000, more than in 1929.

Potato shipments from Halifax are now over for the season and have been declared to be the biggest in the history of the port.

Illustrating the growth of tourist travel into Canada, 95,509 foreign cars entered Canada in 1930, while in 1929 the total was 5,409-468.

At the end of February of this year, official registration of radio sets in Canada totalled 505,758, an increase of $1,612 over the similar period of last year.

Cadmium, a by-product obtained in the production of zinc, was produced for the first time in Canada early in 1928 at Trail, B.C. Used for plating purposes demand for it has increased very rapidly.

The Province of New Brunswick's largest bond issue was sold at the most favorable price in 25 years when a bid of 99.43 was accepted for $5,215,000 4% per cent. 30-year bond issue, making the interest cost to the province 4.53 per cent.

New bridges to span the St. Lawrence and other rivers are to be built by the Quebec Government this year at a cost of $8,000,000. They will be built at points that will link up the highways in the province into a whole.

First large cattle consignment to move east since November, 15 cars or 325 head of cattle for export to Great Britain, left Winnipeg by special Canadian Pacific train which totalled 37 cars of stock, including 22 cars for eastern Canada points.

A single British Columbia Sitka spruce may contain 8,000 to 10,000 feet board measure of lumber. Lumber used in building an ordinary five-or-six-roomed frame house is estimated at 15,000 feet, hence two good-sized Sitka spruce trees would suffice for the house.

Crowds estimated at 500,000 people watched the Empress of Britain sail down the Clyde from her birthplace at Clydebank to undergo trials. The ship was escorted by six tugs, a police launch and six airplanes. This $15,000,000 ship was built for a speed of 24 knots and has already done 26 knots in preliminary trials.

Ten minutes terminal stop at St. Ignace, Ont., and a chance greeting between G. C. Hay and William Ardell, Canadian Pacific mechanic, spanned 45 years of separation and silence between Ardell and his family. It appeared in conversation that Hay was Ardell's nephew and the latter will now visit his family in Vancouver whom he has not seen for nearly half-a-century.

The Bay of Fundy steamer Princess, Helene will have her first summer season this year and with the opening in June of the Lakeside Inn, new C. P. R. hotel at Yarmouth, heavy tourist traffic is looked for through Saint John from both the United States and Canada. The Cornwallis Inn at Kentville and the Place at Digby will also attract a large influx of visitors. (281) and finished, in a most artistic and harmless fashion to gladden the eye of everyone who may look upon them. The act of correctly finishing off, or polishing a show sample of seeds is the harmless process of smoothing up the external covering of the individual kernels, and at the same time removing some of the coating where it may be in excess.

The advantages are all in favor of the manipulating, careful exhibition who does not over do this exacting job. Every major show is overloaded with beautiful samples absolutely ruined by too harsh and untimely treatment.

The deceiving thing about over indulgence in this polishing act is that the tricky after effects are not immediately apparent. These effects manifest themselves gradually after a few days or even after some weeks.

Just about the time the hard earned and beautiful sample is ready for shipment to the show, one may find that the seeds have taken on a different appearance, less attractive, not so convincing. As with an apple, which accidentally rolls to the floor as it is being patted gently and caressed by the good mother for the dinner table the bruises may not be noticed today but alas! Look for the ugly brown marks on the morrow when nature puts in her unseen, silent chemical work of reaction. Nature has a counteraction for every move that does not meet with her absolute approval.

Polishing, well done, lives up to the individual kernels so that they slip closer and quicker against one another, thus leaving less air spacing. The result is more kernels to the bushel measure and proportionally greater mass density which, in wheat as an example, will produce greater weight per bushel.

The internal substance of any seed is always more dense than the external covering (as the bran of wheat). Therefore, it is at once apparent that the more one can reduce the outside covering, wherever it may be in excess, the greater will be the density or weight of the kernel in proportion to its volume.

Correct finish does not enhance lustre and add brilliancy to any hand surfaced seed. The range of shading in color of the individual kernels seem to melt and run into one another. The result is more unified mass color, more apparent from a distance than when the observer is closer to the sample. Beware of tampering with any seeds which have not a hard covering or those which possess a bloom or coating, as found on rye for example, which is always associated with that specific kind of seed.

There is not a display of seeds especially those possessing a coarse hull covering (such as oats or barley) which does not contain many individual kernels upon which are spots of various sizes, shapes, positions and ranges of color. A good finish seems to have the tendency to subdue the detrimental, ocular impression of these spots.

It is quite common for oats to have large pink, rotten spots beneath the front brown shield. These are natural deposits which have accumulated after the flowering stage of the seed. They cannot be removed. They are not objectionable.

These disadvantages of over-finishing and polishing, while perhaps not immediately detected at the time of processing, are so many that every exhibitor should abstain from the practice as much as possible, until he has found out through tests and mistakes by experience, just what, and what not to do. Never experiment with a portion of seed which one contemplates using for an exhibit. Use some representative, dry seed for this purpose. When the experiment is complete set the seeds to one side for a while and take time to expect results. In many cases the writer found no apparent change until the cool of winter turned into the drying warmth of summertime.

The coating may, through overwork, develop blisters which affect color and vitality and by the slow loosening and raising of the skin, cause a reduction in the weight per bushel measure. The ends of oats especially begin to curl and mushroom. The bottom front splits along the sides and exposes the germ seed underneath. This creates greater air spaces and where once the weight per bushel was heavy it gradually becomes less.

Vitality is weakened. This is especially detrimental at seeding time if the natural, protective covering has been tampered with to such an extent that it is of very little value to shield the precious seed against adverse moisture, or soil or temperature, or disease, or insect attacks. It is comparative to exposing a child to the severe elements without proper clothing.

Assuming that the World Show sample has passed the scrutinizing eye of the hand picker and is complete in every way, suppose we journey with the writer through some of the simple and safe, natural processes of finishing off, taking the different kind of seeds in order of their relative importance.

Wheat—Place the sample in large cotton sacks—about one-third full—and shake in an end to end motion, about thirty changes to the minute, for about three to five minutes at a time. Then rest the sample an equal length of time by flattening it out. This rest insures against a rise in temperature due to friction. Keep this up until one notices a shortening of the brush end of the kernel. The process is overdone when the brush end is completely removed. Wheat should increase in weight about one and one half pounds per bushel and take on a lustrous shine.

(Concluded next week.)

CHICAGO STOCK SHOW TO BE BIGGEST IN HISTORY

CHICAGO—Early entries pouring in to the head quarters of the International Live Stock Exposition to be held at the Chicago Stock Yards this year, November 28 to December 5, give assurance of one of the largest, displays of livestock and educational exhibits in its history. So reports J. H. Heide, secretary-manager of the exposition.

Here and There

Maple sugar and maple syrup produced in Canada in the spring of 1931 had an estimated value of $1,537,700 of which the former accounted for $930,800 and the latter for $2,606,900. The Province of Quebec is the largest producer in the Dominion.

Following a long succession of shipments in an experiment commenced a year ago, thirty-five cars of beef cattle, the bulk of them for British consumption, left Winnipeg recently by special Canadian Pacific train for the Atlantic seaboard for shipment to Great Britain.

Thousands of salmon recently "took the elevator" on their way to the spawning grounds in the upper sections of the Stamp River, British Columbia, when they used the fishway built by the Canadian Government Department of Fisheries to overcome the tumbling waters at Stamp Falls.

With the departure on October 1 of the big Sikorsky amphibian plane for Boston, the Pan-American Airways concluded their service between Boston and Halifax which was inaugurated August 1. In August, 70 passengers were carried on the southbound trips and 67 northbound in 18 flying days.

Manitoba's threshing was practically complete for 1931 in the first week of October, according to the weekly crop statement of the Canadian Pacific Railway department of agriculture. Saskatchewan was then 51 per cent, threshed and Alberta 55 per cent, with northern areas in each province still holding heavy crops ripening for the machines.

His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, together with his eldest son, Viscount Duncannon, have in view hunting and fishing trips to New Brunswick next year. During his recent visit to the province, His Excellency was presented with a complimentary hunting and fishing license by Hon. C. B. Richards, Premier of New Brunswick.

Completion of organization work of the Dominion Agricultural Credit Company was announced recently by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who stated that "subscription to over sixty per cent of the capital stock of the company have been received and the requisite steps to complete the organization have been taken." Head office of the company will be in Regina.

The new dental car, built by the Canadian Pacific Railway and equipped by the Rosedale, Toronto, Chapter of the I. O. D. E., was turned over for use in Northern Ontario to the Ontario Government recently. This car, claimed to be unique on the continent, will have running rights over all railway lines in Northern Ontario and is equipped with fully modern dental facilities, waiting room, living accommodation, laboratory, consulting room, clinic and dental chair.

The number of Canadians who are part owners of the Canadian Pacific continues to increase. A year ago, on September 2, the total number of the company's Canadian stockholders was 26,185. On September 1 of this year the number had grown to 35,217, an increase of 9,032 shareholders. Many of these have been added since the recent break in the security markets carried stock prices to new low levels in indicating that Canadians have confidence in the country's ability to "come back" to prosperity. The world's largest exposition of the most making breeds of livestock will open its doors upon the mammoth International amphitheatre and 22 adjoining buildings on the first Saturday following Thanksgiving. Each day and evening will be crowded with events of education, inspiration and entertainment to the visitors from town and country who combine to make the International Live Stock Exposition the most cosmopolitan agricultural show in the land.

Officials of the International Grain and Hay Show, a department of the Live Stock Exposition, but in itself the world's largest competitive display of small seeds, hay, and grain, state that in spite of the drought in many sections of the country this year, they look for the largest entry in the history of this event.

It will be due, they say, to the lifting of the ban on exhibits from corn hovers infested regions of the country. Exhibits from infested territory may be sent to the exposition this year after careful treatment under Government supervision at regional assembly points before they are sent to Chicago.

Australian Wheat on Way They also assert that samples of wheat from as far remote points of the globe as three of the important wheat producing states of Australia are en route to the 1931 show.

According to the management, the dead line on accepting entries for the individual livestock classes of the exposition will be November 1; for the Grain and Hay Show, November 10; and for that spectacular and highly practical side of the exposition, the carload lot classes of commercial cattle, sheep, and swine, November 21.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated and food sour. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go, get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. See a bottle, any drug store. (Made in Canada.)

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper, mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

YOUR TEETH AND YOUR HEALTH

The comfort which comes from a clean mouth with healthy teeth, and the ability to chew properly with sound teeth are not the only important points to be considered with regard to the relationship of teeth and health.

In the mouths of many adults there is present some chronic infection about the teeth which may lead to damage of some vital organ of the body by causing disease of that organ.

Infected teeth are a menace at all times. There are certain individuals who harbour such an infection for years with apparently no serious results. There is, however, no way of foretelling in which individual, who has an infection about a tooth, there will occur infections in other parts of the body as a result of their infection present in the tooth.

The germs responsible for the infections about the teeth may be picked up and carried by the blood stream and deposited in any part of the body. Here they multiply and set up a chronic infection similar to the one which they caused in the mouth. Just how serious this is depends upon where the infection occurs. It is obvious that if it should be a valve of the heart which is damaged, as a result of such an infection, the second infection is much more serious than was the primary one in the tooth.

As we have indicated, no one can say what will happen in any particular case. That is why the dentist extracts infected teeth in order to remove the infection from the mouth where it is a constant menace because it may lead to serious damage in other parts of the body.

Once tooth infection has occurred, it is necessary that, as a preventive measure against other conditions which may arise from such infection the infected tooth be properly dealt with. It would have been better still, however, to have gone one step further back, which would have brought us to prevention of infection about the tooth.

Healthy teeth in adult life are the reward of proper feeding from the time of birth on throughout the years of growth. Next in importance to diet come cleanliness and regular visits to the dentist in order that serious trouble may be prevented by early treatment.

The child should be taken to the dentist, not because he has a tooth ache, but in order that he may never have one. If parents will co-operate with their dentist, beginning with their child's primary teeth, it will be possible for them, in most cases, to secure for their children healthy teeth throughout adult life, and besides, free them from the dangers which accompany infected teeth.

Questions concerning Health addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

rival, Claire for the moment monopolized him as she inquired after his injury. Then she gave way to the others. After a short stay the girls withdrew, leaving McLeod alone with his friend.

"Mandy, old chap," said the sergeant. "You were always a good friend but what you have just done for Claire put me deeper in your debt than ever."

"You would have done as much for me Paul, so let it go at that." He then told Browning of the events just recorded, finishing with, "What is to be done next, Paul?"

"I think we shall have to speak to the chief and see if we can get a line on that ring that you took from Chowitsky. I will send word to him and ask him to come this afternoon about three o'clock. Will that suit you?"

"Yes, I have no other plans." "Good enough. By the way, Claire tells me she is going to Calgary to stay with Marion, that is fine. I think quite a lot of that girl, Mandy. How are you making out with Marion?"

"Oh, so-so. I think both the girls are the nicest I ever met, but then you know I was never much of a man for the ladies."

"You'll fall sometime my boy," (with a chuckle).

"Well, time will tell," McLeod answered as he prepared to depart. "I shall be here at three. Anything you want?"

"No thanks."

McLeod went back to the Ottawa hotel, to join the girls and when he reached there found that Sir Herbert Newton had arrived on business. He looked upset over something and was very quiet as they went into luncheon. When the meal was nearly over, Sir Herbert, turning to McLeod, said, "I am going to the hospital this afternoon. If you wish we can go together."

"That will be fine. Shall you be staying in Ottawa long?"

"I shall take Marion and Claire back to Calgary as soon as I have finished my business. I am having trouble at the wells and cannot afford to be away long. The authorities will have to do something about it. The guards seem unable to cope with the situation."

"Can you rely on the loyalty of your guards?"

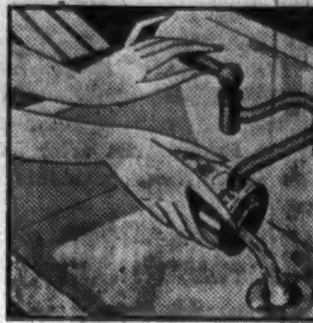

"Certainly. They are true Canadians. I haven't a foreigner on the place."

"How many men do you employ?"

"About ten thousand around the fields. More outside."

"It would be a hard job to pick out any one man then."

"It isn't only one man, it's an organized gang. Come on, we'll go and see Browning. I'll get action somewhere."

The secret service chief had not arrived when the two men were admitted to the sergeant's ward and after greeting him Sir Herbert said,

"What are you going to do Browning? I understand that you are in charge of this case. I must have somebody up there who is capable of getting to the bottom of this trouble."

"I have something in mind, Sir Herbert, but I should like to talk it over with the chief, he'll be here directly."

"Very well, we'll wait for him. How long do you expect to be laid up here?"

"It will only be a matter of days now, I think. My ankle is getting quite strong. Here comes the chief now."

Peter van de Quirk came into the ward. A short, fleshy man, with small pig-like eyes that were set too close together. His glance was keen and his florid complexion indicated that he liked the good things of the world. His general aspect was one of slipperiness. He could be very amiable at times and this was evidently one of those times.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," he boomed, as he sat in the chair the sergeant pointed to. "How are you, sergeant? Soon be up and around, eh? Can't have my best man tied up the way you know. Getting better?"

"Pretty good, chief. Meet Sir Herbert Newton and Mr. McLeod. Mr. McLeod is taking my place and doing some good work for us. I told you about him some days ago."

"How do you do Sir Herbert and Mr. McLeod. Making quite a name for yourself I believe as a hero."

"How do you mean sir?"

"Oh, young man rescues kidnapped maiden, and all that. Saw it on the Radiograph. Can't keep that sort of news from getting out. The public must be fed, you know."

"The public are getting fed too much now. Fed up," put in Sir Herbert. "I want an investigator up at Wainwright at once chief. A good one."

"Why, what is the matter Sir Herbert?"

"Matter?" gasped the choleric old gentleman. "What is not the matter. Men getting killed and injured, machines breaking down, the power going off when it ought to be on. Why, in another six months, at the rate we're going I shant have a man on the place, and you ask me what the matter is. Ferris says the cause of the power breakdown is that the machinery is out of date. Well, maybe it is. That's his end of it. At the next meeting of the cabinet I'll see about that but I want you to send up some men to ferret things out. And I want 'em now." Sir Herbert paused for breath.

"Now let me see. Who is your best man sergeant?"

"I should send McLeod, Chief. He is new to the game but he is unknown up there. Most of our operators are known to someone or other

He will have a good chance to work under cover. Let him go as a roustabout, that will give him a chance to get around the fields without question."

"That is a good plan but I will add to it. I will go up myself for a week or two, officially. That will cause the miscreants to lay off for awhile, and then after I have gone they will start in again and that will give McLeod a chance to get in with them. When you have recovered sergeant you had better run up there yourself. McLeod, you keep in touch with me. We'll soon catch 'em. If you find anything out, let me know at once. I shall go up there tomorrow. Is that satisfactory, Sir Herbert?"

"Yes, that is all right."

"Good, then let us go over to the club and talk this thing over comfortably," and bidding the sergeant take care of himself, he practically dragged Sir Herbert from the ward.

"What do you think of the chief?" asked Paul after they had gone.

"How long has he been on the force?"

"About five years. He is supposed to be a good man."

"Is there anything else you want to tell me before I go to Wainwright?"

"No, I shall be up there myself soon and then we'll dig in and clear this thing up."

"Well then, I'll toddle along. Bye bye Paul."

CHAPTER TWO

The next morning, the Trans-Canada air express (which maintained a daily service between Halifax and Vancouver) left Ottawa, carrying our friends as passengers. Stops were made at the large centers but the huge multi-powered plane soon made short work of the distance between Ottawa and Calgary. The passenger planes of the Canadian Air Corporation, always flew on the lower levels in order to accommodate the sightseeing passengers. The faster mail planes could be seen flying higher up, and occasionally a member of the Canadian Air Patrol would flit by as he went about his business. After leaving Winnipeg, what used to be known as "the prairies" came into view. It is said that years ago this terrain was nothing but windswept grassland. It hardly seems credible, as we gaze down on the neat farms, each with its windbreak of trees. Never did the eye behold a better farming country. Due to the scientific aid of the government experimental stations, record crops were grown on this land by master farmers. All of this made topics of conversation for our friends as they passed over it and after a trip that, no matter how often taken, never grows tiresome) the plane landed them safely at their destination in Calgary.

McLeod spent that night as Sir Herbert's guest and left the following day for Wainwright, Claire bid him an affectionate farewell, almost as if he had been a brother, but Marion had been most formal as she said goodby to him. Had she known the circumstances under which they were to meet again and what each had to suffer before they did so, this story might have had a different ending. As it is, we must leave Marion to entertain her friend while we follow McLeod on his travels.

"Northern Mail" it was not long before he saw the great Buffalo Park for which Wainwright has ever been famous, and shortly after, he landed at the oilwells. He found the time-keeper and got himself a job as a roustabout and then, as he did not have to start work until the next day, went for a stroll round the fields.

That night, if we could have peeped into a shack, well set apart from the workmen's buildings, we should have seen the same men seated round a table that we saw in Moncton. This numbered cards were not in evidence but the men were seated in the same order as before, with the exception that numbers one and two were and number five's chair was empty.

No. 1 was speaking. "We have not very much time to do the work; the Supreme Council is anxious for us to complete it. The failure to obtain the plans of the aeroplane, although not fatal, was bad and there must be no more such failures. We regret the passing of our comrade number five at the hands of this McLeod, but he died for the good of the cause and we must carry on. McLeod is in the fields now and must be watched. If he interferes, he must be disposed of, but we want to avoid any complications. You will all continue the work that you have been doing. A few more accidents in the oilfield and they will have a strike on their hands that they will not be able to stop. You will obey number two implicitly, disobedience means death. The speaker's eyes glittered as he made a significant motion with his hand. The meeting dispersed and as the men left the shack, McLeod, who had drifted round that way unwittingly, thought he saw Chowitsky, but lost the man in the dark. Loading some oldrums on a truck the next morning, in pursuance of his duties, he did see Chowitsky go by on another truck and talking earnestly with another man. He resolved to keep a watchful eye open. That afternoon he was sent for by Sir Herbert.

On entering the office he was handed a letter. "What do you think of that?" said Sir Herbert. McLeod opened the letter and read as follows: "Sometime tonight, main number will be blown up. One man only will do the job. McLeod will know who sends this."

"It must be that masked stranger who has warned us before. There is only one thing to do and that is watch number four main tonight," said McLeod after reading the letter.

"Had you not better warn Van de Quirk?"

"I prefer not. This time I think I can handle it alone."

"Well, don't take any chances," said Sir Herbert, and after a short general conversation, McLeod withdrew.

That night just after dusk, he was safely hidden near well 4. He had prepared for a long wait and had also brought his automatic with him but not intend to use it unless it was unavoidable. He was not a killer by nature. Some three hours after taking his position he saw a black shape taking form in the darkness and gradually assume the figure of a man. Ducking under the derrick, it disappeared and McLeod edged closer, stalking his quarry as though it were a deer. Presently he made out the man stooping by the cap of the well. He was fumbling with a box and seem to be saw Chowitsky, but lost the man

REPORTED MISSING AT ROLL CALL

CANADA'S FIRST NATIONAL REMEMBRANCE DAY WEDNES. NEXT

On November 11th, there will be held a national service from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In the cities of the east and west and in every little town across this broad Dominion the remnant of a great army will gather in remembrance of those comrades who have "gone west."

The cenotaphs of the cities and the humble little memorials of the prairie towns will again have their "day." On all other days the busy traffic passes them by—but this is their day.

How diverse in their styles and construction they are! A battle-scarred machine gun mounted on a few stones and the towering memorial at the Menin Gate that bears the name of 56,000 missing men of whom 47,500 are Canadians, and where, facing east across that immortal salient, a British bugle sounds "Last Post" every night. The mighty cenotaph in Whitehall and the Memorial Clock tower in Wainwright are identical in the idea that brought them forth—enduring monuments of stone and bronze that shall last through the ages.

And there is a still far greater monument but, alas, one that cannot last. The British Empire Service League of which the Canadian Legion is a part. A great monument, perhaps the greatest ever built by the hand of man. Empire-wide, world-wide. An organization in which money will not buy membership. The ablest politician in the Empire today no matter to what giddy heights he may attain, can not possess full voting rights in that club. The multi-millionaire must stay outside while the poor, shabby, out-of-work, with the service button on his coat has right of entry.

Perhaps the glory of this great organization shall pass away with the men who called it into being. Perhaps their sons and daughters will see to it that the Legion shall carry on, or perhaps—which God forbid—another war will provide the initiatory ceremonial for another crop of members in good standing.

CANADIAN LEGION B. E. S. L.

The Annual Memorial Service will be held on Wednesday, November 11th. All ex-service men are requested to parade at the TOWN HALL at 10.45 A.M. (Medals and decorations to be worn.) A short service, two minutes silence will be held at the MEMORIAL TOWER, a wreath laid and the Last Post sounded in honour of fallen comrades followed by service in the Wainwright Theatre.

The annual general meeting will be held in the Oddfellows' Hall at 7.30 P.M., when Comrade G. L. Hudson will present his report on the Dominion Convention. A programme and dance will follow and all ex-soldiers and their wives or lady friends are cordially invited. Admission free.
